Olinda Golf Course is not for the faint hearted.

Located in the beautiful Dandenong Ranges the golf course was originally built in 1952 to act as a firebreak for the Olinda Village Township. It's an 18 hole public course on 98 acres or 34.29 hectares of Crown Land administered by Parks Victoria and managed as a Concession.

The course is a country-style golf course, nothing elegant. It's renowned for its steep fairways, fabulous views, magnificent Mountain Ash trees and Rhododendrons. Due to the style of the course, it's proximity to Melbourne and the relaxed atmosphere of the Olinda Golf House café it's a course where many occasional golfers feel comfortable playing or learning to play.

The greens are clay based – reflecting the era in which the Course was established. Recycled water is available via a treatment plant managed by the Shire of Yarra Ranges Council, and it is hoped that the small dam of two megalitres will be supplemented with bore water toward the end of 2008.

While some might refer to Olinda Golf Course as “mountain goat terrain” there is a contingent of regular players who think nothing of the steep fairways and minimally irrigated greens. For every fantastic fairway that seems to offer a fabulous shot to hit for miles downhill there is an adjacent fairway to be climbed.

The initiated golfers all have their own opinion on the best way to play an “easy nine” with no steep hills. The pro-shop can provide a golf card with an “easy nine” composite course for an enjoyable and relaxed game.

With such a unique course, it's one where challenges are made with mates or memories of lessons with fathers replayed. There are stories of those who have played golf in the snow, lost their balls in the fog, a wombat flop on a ball or a kookaburra snatch it from the green. Because it's relaxed many play twilight golf with just their dogs for company.

As one course designer recently said “you can build a golf course but it's impossible to build such magnificent trees or views”, while a golfing professional from Queensland said that everyone should play Olinda Golf Course at least once in a lifetime. But one thing is for certain, everyone who plays the Olinda Golf Course always remembers it and can always brag about it.

The Olinda Golf House is open 7 days a week from morning till early evening. It is not open for dinner but will take bookings for special functions such as birthdays, weddings and corporate events at night time.

The golf course looks fantastic on google earth – so just google to check out the location.
